SENATE COMMITTEE FINDS TAX PAYERS' MONEY BOUGHT CARS

Sanitary District Em- ployees Also Get "Accessories"

CHICAGO, May 11.—The state senate committee investigating how the sanitary district disposed of taxpayers' money was unable to find any evidence that expensive liquor parties were staged by the board members, but the committee announced it had learned that $10,000 was spent on "accessories" for automobiles of various persons.

The evidence the investigating body uncovered tended to indicate that thousands of dollars were spent for plush upholstery, expensive smoking fixtures, fancy radiator caps and even bullet proof glass.

The disclosures revealed that the trustees of the board went in for decorative automobiles in a large way. Bills ranging from $100 to $1,000 were found for shining up automobiles and adding decorative touches.

Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the board, and six others have been indicted on graft charges.

Noted in the bills found by the senate committee—the least powerful of four agencies investigating the alleged graft were such items as these:

Bills totalling $789 for "dressing up" automobiles bought by the board for Crowe, paid on November 30, 1927.

Seven automobiles, costing between $5,500 and $7,000 each, "for employees," purchased in 1928.

A two-tone leather seat costing $285.

Shining up car, $270.

Installing smoker sets, vanity sets and relacquering, $350.

Bullet proof glass trunk racks and repairs to upholstery, $450.

Removing, repairing and installing radiator, $450.

ISSUE WARRANTS IN NEW BOMBING CASE

CHICAGO, May 11.—Visioning a war between hoodlum factions in Chicago to control government of the suburbs, John E. Northrup, first assistant state's attorney, ordered conspiracy warrants brought against William Curo, owner of the Radio Club, in Niles, and two of Curo's employees.

The three are accused of the bombing yesterday of the roadhouse owned by Michael Oszkarski, brother of the chief of police at Niles.

Northrup asserted the gangsters in Chicago seek to gain a throttle in the suburbs, to use as bases for liquor running and to operate roadhouses. He cited the bombing as part of this warfare.

WABASH PERMITTED TO BUY RAILROAD

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Conditional permission was granted the Wabash Railway by the interstate commerce commission today to complete purchase of the Lake Erie and Fort Wayne railroad in which it already has a substantial interest.

Simultaneously, the commission denied a joint application of the New York Central and Nickel Plate railroads for authority to acquire control of the Lake Erie and Fort Wayne.

Conditions prescribed by the commission's order provide that the Wabash shall maintain the separate corporate entity of the Lake Erie and Fort Wayne and it shall continue to handle traffic from all lines reaching its rails without discrimination.

GANG DEATH VICTIM IS GIVEN BRILLIANT FUNERAL SERVICES

Guinta Buried In $10,000 Casket; Wears Diamonds

CHICAGO, May 11.—Dressed in evening clothes, diamond studs gleaming in the shirt front and gems glittering from rings, the body of Joseph Guinta was buried today, in a bronze, glass-topped casket reported to have cost $10,000.

In keeping with his rank, head of the Sicilian organization, Guinta was given one of the most elaborate funerals ever accorded a Chicago gangster. It probably did not equal that of some of the gang leaders, but it was lavish to a degree.

Guinta left $250,000 in cash in a safe deposit box.

The bodies of Albert Anselmi and John Scallisi, who were Guinta's companions in death, will remain in the morgues for the time being.

Anselmi, a Scallisi and Guinta furnished the latest episode in the drama of gang warfare here. They were beaten, given the "third degree," and shot to death last Wednesday. They were henchmen of Al Capone, and were slain by Capone rivals.

The chapter has become closed, practically, as far as police can concern themselves. They can learn nothing.

Friends and neighbors of Guinta crowded into his small home yesterday, offering sympathy to his wife, Anna. Huge masses of flowers arrived throughout the day. By night they were stacked everywhere in the house.

Mingling with the crowd were detectives, hoping to gain some hint that would lead to the murderers.

Funeral services for Guinta—there were no church services, nor priest presiding—were held this morning, and his body was taken directly to the cemetery.

The bodies of Scallisi and Anselmi will be taken to Italy for burial, it is understood.

FIND SKELETONS ON OHIO FARM

SANDUSKY, O., May 11.—Workmen grading a large sand bank on the Thomas Wright farm near Hunt's Corners, southeast of here were keeping a close lookout today for human skeletons, of which to date they have unearthed a total of 21.

The finding of the bones has stirred up much speculation among these of the locality as to how they happened to be in the sandbank.

Even the oldest inhabitants cannot recall a cemetery at or near the place and no one remembers ever having heard of an Indian burying ground there.

Some believe that the bones are of "whites" massacred by Indians more than a century ago. Others see visions of a settlement wiped out by cholera.

The skeletons appear to be of "whites" although some insist they are those of Indians. Several are of children.

AMERICAN CAPITAL WILL BUY GRAF ZEPPELIN FOR AIR LINE

CLEVELAND, May 11.—Details for the purchase of the Graf Zeppelin for use on an air passenger line from Los Angeles to Honolulu will be drafted at a conference here Sunday.

John Elden, president of the Ohio Bar Association, upon his return from Washington today, announced the deal will be drawn up in his law offices here.

Cleveland and Los Angeles capital are uniting to buy the big Zeppelin, he said. He expects that the purchase price will be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

Elden will confer Sunday with Col. Jefferson Davis, who has been retained in the negotiations by the Los Angeles interest. Davis was in New York today in conference with American representatives of the Graf Zeppelin.

Negotiations were opened in New York Tuesday, Elden said. At the same time he was commissioned by Dr. Herman Schatain, Berlin lawyer, to assist in the negotiations.

Purchase of the German airship is planned for this summer following its round-the-world flight. Elden said the dirigible is ready for sale and that patent rights were holding up the deal.

He would not reveal who the Cleveland interests in the deal were, but it has been rumored that Skyways, Inc. of which Elden is president, are interested in the project.

Col. Davis, representing the Los Angeles group, is close to the navy lighter-than-air division and legal representatives for transcontinental air transport and Curtiss Flying Service.

Plans of the group provide for formation of an American corporation similar to the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation, American-German subsidiary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Elden said. He pointed out that by purchasing the Graf at least three years will be eliminated in the opening of the line.

Lavarre testified the concern provided the purchase money for four southern newspapers—the Spartanburg Herald and Journal, the Columbia, S. C. Record, and Augusta, Ga., Chronicle—and declared the company did not control any papers and would make no attempt to control their editorial policy.

Lavarre's testimony indicated he and Hall were given a virtual carte blanche by A. R. Graustein, president of the I. P. and P. to purchase newspapers which the I. P. and P. agreed to finance.

Lavarre and Hall were brought into the commission hearings by testimony last week by Graustein his concern had advanced money to support eleven newspapers throughout the country. In all Lavarre testified, he and his partner received $870,000 from the power company to pay for papers, and an additional $40,000 for expenses.

The two said they approached numerous other newspaper owners—all in the south—with propositions for purchase of the papers.

SEEK MYSTERY WOMAN AS CLUE IN DEATH CASE

Harvard Student Was Murdered Doctors Claim

WINDSOR, Conn., May 11.—A report that a mysterious woman had come here to meet Walter T. Huntington on Tuesday, the day before his body was found, sent police off on new leads today in the search for the supposed slayer of the Harvard student.

That report, coupled with the finding of a woman's handkerchief in the youth's pocket, led police to believe that a woman was linked in some way with the case.

Private detectives, employed by Huntington's family, were called into the case today. Members of the Huntington family were said to be dissatisfied with the report of County Detective Edward J. Hickey that the youth had committed suicide.

It was learned from a reliable source that Hickey had never subscribed to the suicide theory himself.

His announcement that he believed Huntington had taken his own life was believed to have been issued in the hope that the murderer would return to the scene and attempt to place the revolver with which the youth was slain near the scene of the crime in an effort to substantiate the suicide theory.

Dr. Henry N. Costello, coroner's physician, and Dr. Aaron P. Pratt, medical examiner, reported that their autopsy showed Huntington had been murdered.

ALLEGES MEMORIAL PARKS DEFRAUDING CITIZENS OF STATE

Alliance Man Will Ask
Attorney General To Investigate

COLUMBUS, O., May 11.—A campaign against "commercialized memorial park associations" which "are defrauding citizens of Ohio of more than $1,000,000 annually," was expected to be launched here today by Hubert Holerman, manager of the associated trades of commerce of Alliance.

Holerman is coming here, it was understood, to appeal to Attorney General Gilbert Bettman and the state securities commission, and will present evidence, it was said, that such organizations have been operating in Mansfield, Cleveland, Columbus, Springfield, Alliance and Akron.

Holerman will charge, according to word received here, that "thoroughly organized business concerns, posing as altruistic societies formed solely to memorialize some honored citizen are 'bleeding' civic spirited citizens" of thousands of dollars.

He is expected to file three definite complaints: (1) that a recent memorial park project in Mansfield netted its sponsors $480,000, (2) that one under way in Alliance will produce a profit of $250,000, (3) that a Columbus association is promoting a project expected to net $800,000 in profits.

Holerman from Alliance, charged that the associations in question first form two interlocking organizations. One, a holding company, sells non-profit making stock in the memorial corporation. The other, a development company, does the actual work of improvement and offers lots for sale.

He contends, it was said, that the connection between these companies and the fact that they are making an enormous profit is withheld from stock buyers or contributors.

Holerman also said he will appeal to the Ohio Bankers' Association.

DEBATE CONTINUES AS MAJORITY GIVES SIGNS OF BREAKING

Farm Bloc Members Help To Embarrass Party Leaders

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Unwilling to face a showdown yet, house leaders let general tariff debate run into its third day today while the senate took a rest preparatory to a vote Monday on the farm bill.

The strong Republican majority in the house showed signs of breaking up over the tariff just like the administration majority in the senate broke up disastrously over the debenture plan this week.

A majority caucus late yesterday disclosed the leaders would face stiff opposition within their own ranks to the right program they had formulated for putting the tariff measure through under pressure within eighteen days.

Farm bloc members manifested a growing dissatisfaction with the increased rates on sugar, machinery and utensils which their farmers must buy.

Leaders may let general debate run on to the middle of next week before deciding how to handle what appears to be an extremely embarrassing situation.

If the bill is opened for amendments, the farm bloc will stage a vigorous fight on the floor to cut down the 3 cents a pound sugar rate and some of the other industrial increases, at the same time seeking to increase rates of agricultural products. If the high pressure rules are applied to subdue them, they plan to bolt to the Democrats and ditch the administration bill.

Administration leaders in the senate have come battered, through just the situation the house leaders appear to be facing.

A second defeat for President Hoover's most ardent supporters was suffered late yesterday when the senate voted 46 to 33 to limit the salary of the federal farm board chairman to $12,000 a year.

Mr. Hoover had anticipated selecting a man whose experience would demand a much larger salary. In deference to his wishes the house had put a provision in the farm bill allowing the president to fix the salary of the chairman.

With the debenture amendment in the bill and some other features unsatisfactory to the administration, the leaders say they will turn against the bill on the final vote Monday, but it is expected to pass easily over their objections.

Before the vote is taken, Senator Brookhart of Iowa, will address the senate on the subject of "Pseudo-Republicans," a name of a letter of Senator Fess of Ohio, calling Brookhart, Senator Borah and others by that term for voting against Mr. Hoover on the debenture plan.

Fess surprised "the Pseudo-Republicans" yesterday by joining them in fixing the $12,000 salary limitation of the board chairman.

REMUS IS PROBING WHISKEY PERMITS

CLEVELAND, May 11.—George Remus, 53, ex-bootleg king and convicted wife-slayer, slipped into and out of Cleveland late yesterday on a brief trip to strengthen old affairs that became tangled when he was sentenced to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

While here he interviewed Matt J. Hinkel, fight promoter, who Remus charged, purchased whiskey deposit certificates which his dead wife, and Franklin Dodge, former department of justice agent conspired to steal from him.

Remus' daughter Romo's account painted him on the trip.

Ownership of the whiskey certificates, which Hinkel said he bought from Joseph C. Breitenstein, local attorney, representing Mrs. Remus, still is in question.

A value of $250,000 was placed upon them when Representative F. H. Laguardia of New York, in an attack upon prohibition enforcement methods, told of the transactions that resulted in them reaching Hinkel's hands.

Couby's financial interests were for the most part represented in the shipping industry. His holdings in Pickands, Mather and Company were valued at $2,415,000. The estate included real estate, 921 by the appraisers. Real estate, consisting of the estate in Wick, Ohio, was valued at $162,200. His life, account showed a balance of $79,713 and his personal effects were listed at $26,400.

The finding of the bones has stirred up much speculation among these of the locality as to how they happened to be in the sandbank.

Even the oldest inhabitants cannot recall a cemetery at or near the place and no one remembers ever having heard of an Indian burying ground there.

Some believe that the bones are of "whites" massacred by Indians more than a century ago. Others see visions of a settlement wiped out by cholera.

The skeletons appear to be of "whites" although some insist they are those of Indians. Several are of children.

AMERICAN CAPITAL WILL BUY GRAF ZEPPELIN FOR AIR LINE

CLEVELAND, May 11.—Details for the purchase of the Graf Zeppelin for use on an air passenger line from Los Angeles to Honolulu will be drafted at a conference here Sunday.

John Elden, president of the Ohio Bar Association, upon his return from Washington today, announced the deal will be drawn up in his law offices here.

Cleveland and Los Angeles capital are uniting to buy the big Zepplin, he said. He expects that the purchase price will be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

Elden will confer Sunday with Col. Jefferson Davis, who has been retained in the negotiations by the Los Angeles interest. Davis was in New York today in conference with American representatives of the Graf Zeppelin.

Negotiations were opened in New York Tuesday, Elden said. At the same time he was commissioned by Dr. Herman Schatz, Berlin lawyer, to assist in the negotiations.

Purchase of the German airship is planned for this summer following its round-the-world flight. Elden said the dirigible is ready for sale and that patent rights were holding up the deal.

He would not reveal who the Cleveland interests in the deal were, but it has been rumored that Skyways, Inc., of which Elden is president, are interested in the project.

Col. Davis, representing the Los Angeles group, is close to the navy, lighter-than-air division and legal representatives for transcontinental air transport and Curtiss Flying Service.

Plans of the group provide for formation of an American corporation similar to the Goodyear-Zepplin Corporation, American-German subsidiary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Elden said. He pointed out that by purchasing the Graf at least three years will be eliminated in the opening of the line.

WITNESSES REVEAL FURTHER BACKING IN NEWSPAPER DEALS

International Paper Bought Four Papers In South

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Details of additional activities of the International Paper and Power Company in the financing of newspapers have been given the federal trade commission by Harold Hall and William Lavarre, young newspaper publishers.

Lavarre testified the concern provided the purchase money for four southern newspapers—the Spartanburg Herald and Journal, the Columbia, S. C. Record, and Augusta, Ga., Chronicle—and declared the company did not control any papers and would make no attempt to control their editorial policy.

Lavarre's testimony indicated he and Hall were given a virtual carte blanche by A. R. Granstein, president of the I. P. and P. to purchase newspapers which the I. P. and P. agreed to finance.

Lavarre and Hall were brought into the commission hearings by testimony last week by Granstein his concern had advanced money to support eleven newspapers throughout the country. In all Lavarre testified, he and his partner received $870,000 from the power company to pay for papers, and an additional $40,000 for expenses.

The two said they approached numerous other newspaper owners—all in the south—with propositions for purchase of the papers.

SEEK MYSTERY WOMAN AS CLUE IN DEATH CASE

Harvard Student Was Murdered Doctors Claim

WINDSOR, Conn., May 11.—A report that a mysterious woman had come here to meet Walter T. Huntington on Tuesday, the day before his body was found, sent police off on new leads today in the search for the supposed slayer of the Harvard student.

That report, coupled with the finding of a woman's handkerchief in the youth's pocket, led police to believe that a woman was linked in some way with the case.

Private detectives, employed by Huntington's family, were called into the case today. Members of the Huntington family were said to be dissatisfied with the report of County Detective Edward J. Hickey that the youth had committed suicide.

It was learned from a reliable source that Hickey had never subscribed to the suicide theory himself.

His announcement that he believed Huntington had taken his own life was believed to have been issued in the hope that the murderer would return to the scene and attempt to place the revolver with which the youth was slain near the scene of the crime in an effort to substantiate the suicide theory.

Dr. Henry N. Costello, coroner's physician, and Dr. Aaron P. Pratt, medical examiner, reported that their autopsy showed Huntington had been murdered.

MISTAKE IN DATES DELAYS HEARING

CANTON, O., May 11.—Due to a "misunderstanding of the date" State Dry Inspectors Edward Little and John Cole, under fire in Columbus, failed to appear here yesterday for the arraignment of former Mayor P. J. Groh of Dover and the hearing was continued until May 15.

Groh is charged with violating the federal prohibition laws. He was arrested after a raid conducted by Little and Cole who turned his case over to federal authorities. The mayor also was arrested on a charge of accepting a bribe.

Little and Cole recently were suspended from the state prohibition department after it was revealed they used girl decoys in trapping alleged bootleggers in Lancaster.

LIFT BAN AGAINST REPORTERS AT JAIL

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The ban on reporters in the district jail where Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil man, is housed under a sentence of ninety days for contempt of the senate, has been lifted by George S. Wilson, director of public welfare.

Wilson said the ban was placed on the jail because the great number of reporters who swarmed there to see how Sinclair was being treated caused confusion and not because of any desire to hide the treatment.

ALLEGES MEMORIAL PARKS DEFRAUDING CITIZENS OF STATE

COLUMBUS, O., May 11.—A campaign against "commercialized memorial park associations" which "are defrauding citizens of Ohio of more than $1,000,000 annually," was expected to be launched here today by Robert Holerman, manager of the associated trades of commerce of Alliance.

Holerman is coming here, it was understood, to appeal to Attorney General Gilbert Betman and the state securities commission, and will present evidence, it was said, that such organizations have been operating in Mansfield, Cleveland, Columbus, Springfield, Alliance and Akron.

Holerman will charge, according to word received here, that "thoroughly organized business concerns, posing as altruistic societies formed solely to memorialize some honored citizen are 'bleeding' civic spirited citizens" of thousands of dollars.

He is expected to file three definite complaints: (1), that a recent memorial park project in Mansfield netted its sponsors $480,000; (2), that one under way in Alliance will produce a profit of $250,000; (3), that a Columbus association is promoting a project expected to net $800,000 in profits.

Holerman from Alliance, charged that the associations in question first form two interlocking organizations. One, a holding company, sells non-profit making stock in the memorial corporation. The other, a development company, does the actual work of improvement and offers lots for sale.

He contends, it was said, that the connection between these companies and the fact that they are making an enormous profit is withheld from stock buyers or contributors.

Holerman also said he will appeal to the Ohio Bankers' Association.

PROTESTS ATTACK

Remus is probing whiskey permits

CLEVELAND, May 11.—George Remus, 53, ex-bootleg king and convicted wife-slayer, slipped into and out of Cleveland late yesterday on a brief trip to straighten out affairs that became tangled when he was sentenced to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

While here he interviewed Matt J. Hinkel, fight promoter, who Remus charged, purchased whiskey deposit certificates which his dead wife and Franklin Dodge, former department of justice agent, conspired to steal from him.

Remus' daughter Romo's accompanied him on the trip.

Ownership of the whiskey certificates, which Hinkel said he bought from Joseph C. Breitenstein, local attorney, representing Mrs. Remus, still is in question.

A value of $250,000 was placed upon them when Representative F. H. Laguardia of New York, in an attack upon prohibition enforcement methods, told of the transactions that resulted in them reaching Hinkel's hands.

DEBATE CONTINUES AS MAJORITY GIVES SIGNS OF BREAKING

Farm Bloc Members Help To Embarrass Party Leaders

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Unwilling to face a showdown yet, house leaders let general tariff debate run into its third day today while the senate took a rest preparatory to a vote Monday on the farm bill.

The strong Republican majority in the house showed signs of breaking up over the tariff just like the administration majority in the senate broke up disastrously over the debenture plan this week.

A majority caucus late yesterday disclosed the leaders would face stiff opposition within their own ranks to the tight program they had formulated for putting the tariff measure through under pressure within a few days.

Farm bloc members manifested a growing dissatisfaction with the increased rates on sugar, machinery and utensils which their farmers must buy.

Leaders may let general debate run on to the middle of next week before deciding how to handle what appears to be an extremely embarrassing situation.

If the bill is opened for amendments, the farm bloc will stage a vigorous fight on the floor to cut down the 3 cents a pound sugar rate and some of the other industrial increases, at the same time seeking to increase rates of agricultural products. If the high pressure rules are applied to subdue them, they plan to bolt to the Democrats and ditch the administration bill.

Administration leaders in the senate have come battered, through just the situation the house leaders appear to be facing.

A second defeat for President Hoover's most ardent supporters was suffered late yesterday when the senate voted 46 to 32 to limit the salary of the federal farm board chairman to $12,000 a year.

Mr. Hoover had anticipated selecting a man whose experience would demand a much larger salary. In deference to his wishes the house had put a provision in the farm bill allowing the president to fix the salary of the chairman.

With the debenture amendment in the bill and some other features unsatisfactory to the administration, the leaders say they will turn against the bill on the final vote Monday, but it is expected to pass easily over their objections.

Before the vote is taken, Senator Brookhart of Iowa, will address the senate on the subject of "Pseudo-Republicans," anent a letter of Senator Fess of Ohio, calling Brookhart, Senator Borah and others by that term for voting against Mr. Hoover on the debenture plan.

Fess surprised "The Pseudo-Republicans" yesterday by joining them in fixing the $12,000 salary limitation of the board chairman.

RETIREES AFTER FIFTY YEARS IN POSTAL SERVICE IN XENIA

Walter E. Wike, Assistant Postmaster, Recalls Primitive Methods Of Early Days; Confesses Secret Yearning For Farming.

WALTER E. WIKE

After serving as general delivery clerk for fifteen years, Mr. Wike was appointed chief clerk April 1, 1888 and then was promoted to be assistant postmaster July 1, 1900.

Political Jobs

There have been times in the history of Xenia when aspirants for post office positions have gathered around the wires on election night and waited with bated breath to hear whether New York and Indiana were going Democratic or Republican.

If the former, then some Democrat of the city heaved a sigh of relief, for it meant that he was going to get a job, and conversely, the Republican aspirant slowly and sadly wended his way homeward to wait for the election four years later.

That was the situation until 1883. Up to that time, the post office employees were always of the political faith of the party in power. When the administration changed hands an entirely new set of employees came in.

Wike, however, was the one exception. He was a Republican but a change in the administration never affected him. He was indispensable to the office. He did practically all of the work and the postmasters could not get along without him. Throughout the years he remained a dependable executive.

Since 1883 all of the employees have been under civil service, meaning that no employee can be removed except for cause and that all employees retained their positions as long as they performed the duties of the office satisfactorily. Wike was the first secretary of the Civil Service Board in Xenia.

Mr. Wike went into the office as a clerk under the administration of Mrs. Lowe. Her husband was shot on the battlefield at Cornifix Ferry September 18, 1861. It was in recognition of his service that President Johnson appointed his widow postmaster of Xenia in 1867, and she was later appointed by President Grant, serving in all twelve years.

Out Six Years

Wike remained three years as clerk. He was out of office from 1876 to 1883 and in the latter year returned as clerk and has been there continuously since that year.

During his connection with the office, Mr. Wike has served under the following postmasters: Manora F. Lowe, Republican, appointed in 1867; Thomas G. Brown, Republican appointed in 1879; M. M. Gaunce, Democrat, appointed in 1885; Nelson A. Fulton, Republican, appointed in 1889; Lewis H. Whitman, Democrat, appointed in 1894; Joseph M. Milburn, Republican, appointed in 1898; John F. Orr, Republican, appointed in 1903; Harry E. Rice, Democrat, appointed in 1916, and C. S. Frazer, Republican, present postmaster, appointed four years ago.

Year by year the business of the post office has increased until the three persons who first kept the office at the time Wike began to work, have given away to twenty-nine employees.

City carrier service was inaugurated during the postmaster-ship of M. M. Gaunce between 1885 and 1889, the first three carriers being M. J. Dunn, John Hook and Martin V. Lucas. Rural free delivery was established during the administration of J. M. Milburn from 1898 to 1903, there being only one carrier, Charles Thompson, at first. Now there are eight.

Given Extension

Mr. Wike was to have been retired at the age of 70 but he was granted a two-year extension, an unusual favor for a man of that age. He had applied for another extension but it was denied.

His home is at 135 High St. Upon his retirement, Mr. Wike expects to keep busy by working a garden in the rear of his home. He eventually hopes to buy a small place in the country and live there having always had a secret desire for farming, he said.

Spirit-Buster Duplicates All Favorite Tricks Produced by Best Mediums

Medium Has Never Done Stunt That He Did Not Reproduce

RIGHT in broad daylight, skull-jaws snapped, horns blew and drumsticks tapped without any visible mechanical aid. All the favorite tricks of the modern medium, apparently supernatural, were played right in the open. But how? Joseph Dunniger, chairman of the investigation committee of physical research, gave it all away. What's more, he showed where his device is of commercial use.

A small wireless transmitting set, in a rubber case, and batteries are fixed on his back under his coat by a harness. Wires run down either trouser leg, giving him negative and positive posts.

Connected with the transmitter, a switch is in his right trouser pocket and a control in his left pocket.

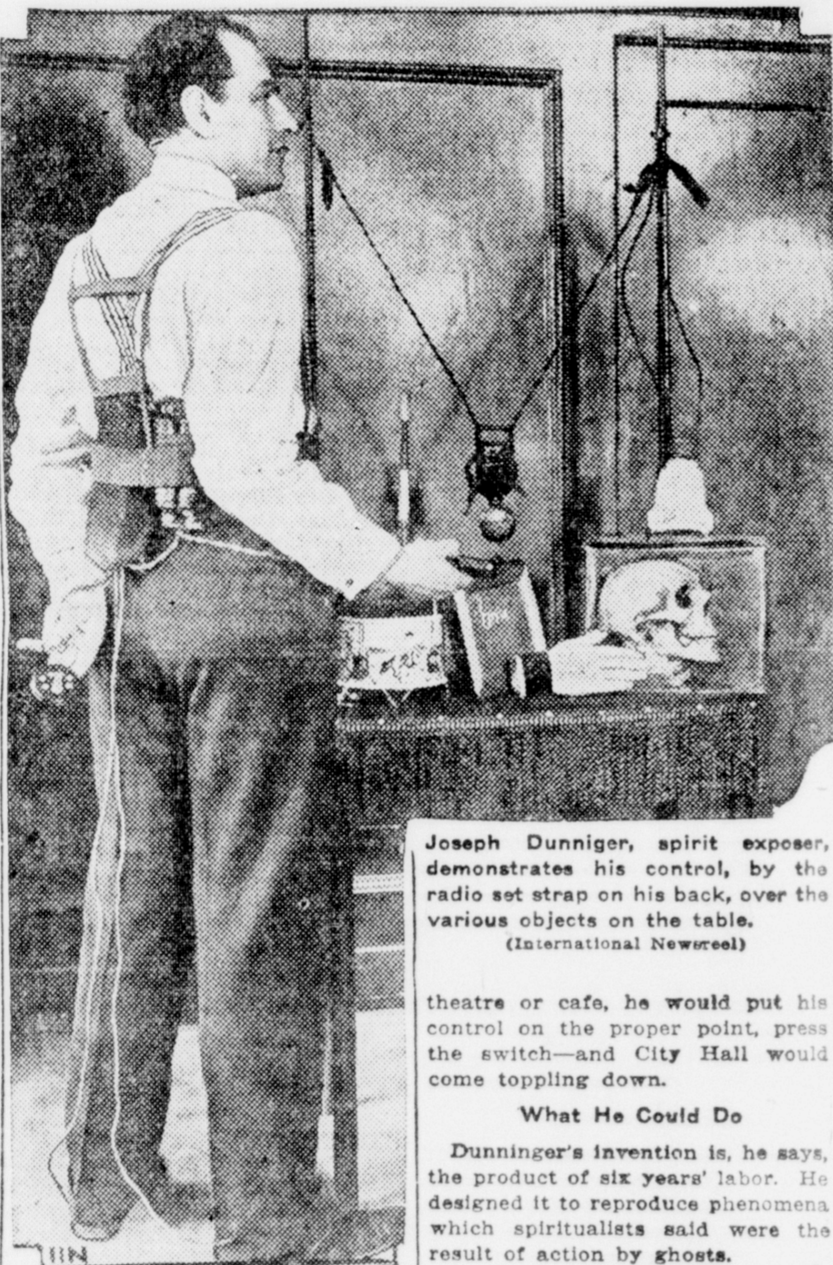

Each of the eight points on the control is attuned to a different wave length, each of which will cause action in the receiving apparatus under his demonstration table, producing the phenomenon desired.

Thus his left hand puts the control on the third point. His right hand presses the switch. The wireless waves go to the receiving apparatus—and the chalk, which has a metal core, is drawn about by electro-magnets to write the dictated message.

Just as he caused these "miracles" to happen, so he could explode bombs wherever he wished by wireless control without danger of ticking clocks or premature explosions ruining his plans, he says.

But Dunniger didn't want to talk much about bombing New York. He expressed no desire to bomb any place. But with his apparatus it could be done like this:—

His bomb would consist of a suitcase or box containing his explosive. In it, too, would be a receiving apparatus, a dry cell battery, with theatre or cafe, he would put his control on the proper point, press the switch—and City Hall would come toppling down.

What He Could Do

Dunniger's invention is, he says, the product of six years' labor. He designed it to reproduce phenomena which spiritualists said were the result of action by ghosts.

Dunniger said that his tiny set would be effective for bomb work only in about a one-mile radius, but that it could be strengthened so that its control would be practically unlimited.

"Why, in this little room," he said, "I could set up an enlargement of this apparatus with which I could bomb San Francisco, El Paso, Miami, Seattle, Kansas City, Chicago and Bangor while I read the funny papers."

negative and positive wires, and an interrupter and coil, which would cause a spark sufficient to set off the explosive when the wires were brought together by wireless control, as were the skull's jaws at the demonstration.

He would attune each bomb's receiving apparatus to a different wave length and place them where he wished. Then, at his leisure in a

Shining-eyed and fresh for the hours that count

WHAT man is pleased at the sight of a tired-out wife--- too borne-down with household duties to try to dress, too weary to look her best for his homecoming?

The women men adore are shining-eyed and fresh, eager for the hours that count.

More and more women today are finding a way to keep young, ten, twenty, even thirty years longer than their mothers.

The great strides of engineering and electrical science have developed marvelous labor-saving devices to relieve women of drudgery. Modern medical science is outwitting middle age by revolutionary discoveries in diet and care of the body.

But it is advertising that has aroused women to a realization of what these new household helps can do. It is advertising that has brought a knowledge of beauty aids and their use. It is advertising that has created a desire for those products which aid women to lead healthier, happier, longer lives.

Always read the advertisements. Keep up with the ever-onward sweep of progress. Do not let yourself be left behind.

RETIREES AFTER FIFTY YEARS IN POSTAL SERVICE IN XENIA

Walter E. Wike, Assistant Postmaster, Recalls Primitive Methods Of Early Days; Confesses Secret Yearning For Farming.

WITH fifty years of service in the Xenia Post Office behind him, Walter E. Wike, assistant postmaster, the oldest employee both in age and point of service, will be retired on pension on his 72nd birthday, Wednesday, May 15. Wike entered the postal service here in 1873 fifty-six years ago at the age of 16 as general delivery clerk when the staff consisted of three employees, including himself. The others were: Postmistress Manora F. Lowe, the only woman ever to hold that office here, who was the widow of Col. John W. Lowe, the first field officer of Ohio to be killed in the Civil War; and John Connable, clerk.

When Wike, who has seen nine postmasters come and go during his connection with the department was first appointed clerk on his 16th birthday, May 15, 1873, he received the meager salary of $15 a month. This wage was paid by Postmistress Lowe out of her own salary, as was that of the other employee at that time. He succeeded Hal Miller, who resigned on account of his health.

He actually began to work for the post office two weeks earlier, having been induced to leave school to accept the job. However, his appointment could not be made formally until he reached his 16th birthday.

No Deliveries
At that time Mr. Wike recalls there was no city delivery service and rural delivery service had not even been considered.

The location of the post office at that time is a matter which has been practically impossible to determine with any degree of accuracy. It was then housed in a small room on Green St. about where the L. S. Barnes and Co. store is now located. For a few years Wike slept in a room in the rear of the office.

The dispatching of mail was done along primitive lines. There were no mailing cases and mail for different points was heaped together on a long table in different piles by cities and sent away.

After serving as general delivery clerk for fifteen years, Mr. Wike was appointed chief clerk April 1, 1888 and then was promoted to be assistant postmaster July 1, 1900.

Year by year the business of the post office has increased until the three persons who first kept the office at the time Wike began to work, have given away to twenty-nine employees.

City carrier service was inaugurated during the postmaster-ship of M. M. Gaunce between 1885 and 1889, the first three carriers being M. J. Dunn, John Hook and Martin V. Lucas. Rural free delivery was established during the administration of J. M. Milburn from 1898 to 1903, there being only one carrier, Charles Thompson, at first. Now there are eight.

Given Extension
Mr. Wike was to have been retired at the age of 70 but he was granted a two-year extension, an unusual favor for a man of that age. He had applied for another extension but it was denied.

His home is at 135 High St. Upon his retirement, Mr. Wike expects to keep busy by working a garden in the rear of his home. He eventually hopes to buy a small place in the country and live there having always had a secret desire for farming, he said.

Spirit-Buster Duplicates All Favorite Tricks Produced by Best Mediums

Medium Has Never Done Stunt That He Did Not Reproduce

RIGHT in broad daylight, skull-jaws snapped, horns blew and drumsticks tapped without any visible mechanical aid. All the favorite tricks of the modern medium, apparently supernatural, were played right in the open. But how? Joseph Dunninger, chairman of the investigation committee of physical research, gave it all away. What's more, he showed where his device is of commercial use.

A small wireless transmitting set, in a rubber case, and batteries are fixed on his back under his coat by a harness. Wires run down either trouser leg, giving him negative and positive posts.

Connected with the transmitter, a switch is in his right trouser pocket and a control in his left pocket.

Each of the eight points on the control is attuned to a different wave length, each of which will cause action in the receiving apparatus under his demonstration table, producing the phenomenon desired.

Thus his left hand puts the control on the third point. His right hand presses the switch. The wireless waves go to the receiving apparatus—and the chalk, which has a metal core, is drawn about by electro-magnets to write the dictated message.

Just as he caused these "miracles" to happen so he could explode bombs wherever he wished by wireless control without danger of ticking clocks or premature explosions ruining his plans, he says.

But Dunninger didn't want to talk much about bombing New York. He expressed no desire to bomb any place. But with his apparatus it could be done like this:—

His bomb would consist of a suitcase or box containing his explosive. In it, too, would be a receiving apparatus, a dry cell battery, with theatre or cafe, he would put his control on the proper point, press the switch—and City Hall would come toppling down.

What He Could Do

Dunninger's invention is, he says, the product of six years' labor. He designed it to reproduce phenomena which spiritualists said were the result of action by ghosts.

Dunninger said that his tiny set would be effective for bomb work only in about a one-mile radius, but that it could be strengthened so that its control would be practically unlimited.

"Why, in this little room," he said, "I could set up an enlargement of this apparatus with which I could bomb San Francisco, El Paso, Miami, Seattle, Kansas City, Chicago and Bangor while I read the funny papers."

He would attune each bomb's receiving apparatus to a different wave length and place them where he wished. Then, at his leisure in a

Shining-eyed and fresh for the hours that count

WHAT man is pleased at the sight of a tired-out wife--- too borne-down with household duties to try to dress, too weary to look her best for his homecoming?

The women men adore are shining-eyed and fresh, eager for the hours that count.

More and more women today are finding a way to keep young, ten, twenty, even thirty years longer than their mothers.

The great strides of engineering and electrical science have developed marvelous labor-saving devices to relieve women of drudgery. Modern medical science is outwitting middle age by revolutionary discoveries in diet and care of the body.

But it is advertising that has aroused women to a realization of what these new household helps can do. It is advertising that has brought a knowledge of beauty aids and their use. It is advertising that has created a desire for those products which aid women to lead healthier, happier, longer lives.

Always read the advertisements. Keep up with the ever-onward sweep of progress. Do not let yourself be left behind.

LEGION WILL MARK VETERANS' GRAVES WITH COUNTY MARKERS

Because graves of veterans of all wars buried in and near Xenia will be marked with a universal marker furnished by the county, Foody Post, American Legion, is anxious to obtain precise information on location of graves so that none will be missed, according to William Rickles, member of the post.

Five hundred uniform gray iron markers are being furnished by the county for this year, to be placed at graves in Woodland and the Catholic Cemetery in Xenia; Mercer Cemetery, New Burlington Pike; and Stevenson Cemetery, east of Xenia. Later markers will be provided for Beaver Cemetery.

With the first markers furnished this year, it is planned to mark all of the veterans' graves in Mercer and Stevenson Cemetery and divide the others between Woodland and the Catholic Cemeteries, finishing the work next year or the year following. Permission of cemetery boards will be obtained in each case and Legion members will install the markers, placing the first supply of 500 before Memorial Day.

The markers were designed by William Rickles, and are being made by the Xenia Foundry and Machine Co. They stand on an iron rod which will be imbedded in a cone of cement to guarantee permanence. The top is a double wreath enclosing a star, and is labelled "U. S. Veteran." The marker contains loops in which to insert a flag standard for decoration purposes.

Graves of veterans of all wars will be marked if their locations are obtainable, and for this reason the Legion is asking the assistance of the public. Relatives or friends of deceased veterans are asked to furnish the Legion with the name of the deceased, the cemetery in which he is buried, the section number, lot number and, if possible the grave number. If this information is not available, they are asked to furnish the name and approximate date of burial, so that the Legion can look up the grave location in the cemetery records. The information should be sent to Foody Post, American Legion, in care of the Sheriff's office, Court House, Xenia.

Theodore H. Bock, 49, who as a field representative of the Red Cross for this district often visited Xenia to conduct inspections and was well known here, died suddenly Thursday afternoon while eating in a restaurant at Cincinnati, according to word received by friends in this city.

For the last six months he had been employed as adult protection officer of Hamilton County. Shortly after sitting down at a table, Bock slumped forward on the table unconscious. Death is believed to have been due to a stroke or heart failure.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Barbara Bock, Hamilton; his widow, Mrs. Emma Bock, Hamilton; one brother, Rudolph, and an adopted daughter.

Bock was a native of Hamilton and during the world war served as a captain in the regular army.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at his wife's home, 910 W. Main St., Hamilton, with interment at Hamilton.

"I Got All the Breaks" Says Boy University President

Hard Work During School Killed Interest in Anything but Work

"MY YOUTH, of course, may be a handicap to me in my new job, the biggest I've ever tackled, but nothing can be done about it." Thus Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of Chicago University at age 30, treats the question of his age.

For all of his youthful appearance, there is little of the boy about Hutchins. The struggle of his college years and responsibilities beyond his age have killed any "play spirit" he might have had. Hutchins has a certain humor. He had been called to Washington with Professor Charles E. Clark, of the Law School, to tell President Hoover about his four-year inquiry into the American judicial system now being conducted by the school. He encountered a Justice during his visit.

"So this is the boy 'dean' of Yale," said the Justice. "I suppose you still teach your students that 'no judges are crazy.'" "No," Hutchins replied quietly. "We let them find that out for themselves."

Robert Maynard Hutchins, tall, slight, boyish-faced man, who was secretary of the Yale Corp. at 23, dean of Yale Law School at 28 and now is to be president of the University of Chicago at 30, asserts luck has been the chief factor in his unprecedented educational career.

He professes not to know why the Yale Corp chose him as secretary before he was graduated from college. He says he can't account for his appointment as dean of Yale Law School soon after his graduation from the school. His appointment as president of the University of Chicago "stunned" him, he says.

Dean Hutchins has no hobbies. His only love is his family—he has a wife and baby daughter. His work is "just a habit," Hutchins says. "I waited on table, washed dishes, worked in a factory and organized a co-operative tutoring school," he said. "But I wouldn't advise a student to work as hard as I did. It burns up his energy."

If Hutchins has advocated any particular educational theory, it is universally in training for law.

He believes a good lawyer should understand something of psychology, sociology and medicine, and he introduced this theory into practice.

THREE INDICTED IN THEFT CASES PLEAD GUILTY SATURDAY

Roy Swain, 24, Jess Allen, 32, and his brother, Ralph, 21, all of Grape Grove, entered guilty pleas when arraigned in Common Pleas Court Saturday morning on a joint indictment charging them with breaking and entering a chicken house on the farm of Harry Heifner, Federal Pike, with intent to steal, last May 4.

Attorney H. D. Smith, appointed to defend asked the court for suspended sentences. The trio was examined by the court which heard their statements and that of Sheriff Ohmer Tate, Judge R. L. Goady deferred sentence in the three cases.

James Blair, indicted for third offense of liquor law violation; Oliver Warwick, charged in an indictment with receiving and concealing stolen property, and Calvin Null, indicted for removing mortgaged property from the county with intent to defraud, each pleaded not guilty when arraigned Saturday morning, but their cases have not been assigned for trial by the court.

John Kenneth Nooks, 30, colored, this city, scheduled to go on trial in Common Pleas Court Monday with his father, Martin Nooks, 60, on a joint indictment for burglary and larceny, changed his plea of not guilty to guilty Saturday. The court postponed sentence pending the outcome of his father's trial. They are accused of stealing twenty fleeces of wool from the farm of Frank Pistick, near Yellow Springs, last April 30.

PAIR ARRESTED ON LIQUOR CHARGES

Affidavits charging them with possessing and transporting liquor were filed in Probate Court Saturday morning against Cable Walls, 24, and Robert Ball, 27, both colored, of Springfield, arrested by police and a prohibition inspector Friday night.

The two colored men were taken into custody at the Pennsylvania viaduct on the Springfield Pike, three miles north of Xenia. Patrolmen Charles Thompson and J. E. Craig and Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, who made the arrests, confiscated five gallon tins of alleged liquor, according to Police Chief M. E. Graham.

The pair pleaded not guilty in Probate Court and bonds in each case were fixed at $600 by Judge S. C. Wright Saturday.

XENIANS TAKE OVER POPULAR RESORT AT SUMMERLAND BEACH

Announcement was made Friday that High G. Ruhlman, former Xenian, Steve Phillips, popular Xenia harness racing starting judge and G. A. Willett, this city, plan to take over the operation of the Summerland Beach Hotel, situated on Buckeye Lake at Millersport, O., this summer.

The attractive hostelry will be opened under the management of the Xenia associates on Decoration Day, May 30 and it will remain open during the summer vacation season, closing on Labor Day next September.

Located eighty-five miles from Xenia, the hotel, considered one of the finest in the vicinity of that resort, accommodates 200 people and has a waterfront stretch of 893 feet, providing facilities for swimming, boating and fishing.

Dancing will also be a feature during the summer months.

The hotel has attractive surroundings, and in addition there are picnic grounds and an up-to-date playground for children on the property.

In revealing plans for opening the hotel, Steve Phillips disclosed that he has cancelled a great majority of the engagements on grand circuit and shortship circuit tracks for which he had been booked for the early summer months.

He has postponed the opening of his season with the harness races until about the middle of June, when he expects to send them away at the Marion, O. shortship circuit meet.

Ruhlman and Phillips have been associated in the operation of a skating rink at Lancaster, O., but recently closed it for the summer months. Ruhlman at one time was manager of the old Lyric skating rink here and also of Kil Kare Park, located three miles west of Xenia.

daughter of the speaker of the house of representatives and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. She is getting to be a big little girl now—four years old last St. Valentine's Day, strong and large for her age, no more spoiled than the average child of a one-child family and by all reports clever and bright as should be expected of the granddaughter of Theodore Roosevelt and the daughter of Roosevelt's clever daughter, "Princess Alice" Roosevelt Longworth.

Paulina is a fine looking but not pretty little girl. There is a definite family resemblance in her rather strongly marked features, to her famous maternal grandfather, and a less well defined resemblance to her father.

She wears long hair in an age when most little girls are bobbed. She probably will have brown hair and medium complexion when she grows up.

She is always dressed carefully and attractively, but not expensively, in well chosen and sensible little girl clothes.

And no daughter of royalty is guarded from the public more carefully than Paulina.

Princess Alice is determined her little girl shall be as little in the limelight as possible.

She is learning to ride a pony and is wild about ponies and horses. On Saturday of this week she will be a very much thrilled spectator at a horse show where some of her little friends will ride, and where she probably will be riding, too, in a few years.

Mrs. Etta Shepard, 105 S. King St., underwent an operation for gall trouble Saturday morning at Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, where she has been receiving treatment this week. Dr. Robert Austin performed the surgery.

LEGION WILL MARK VETERANS' GRAVES WITH COUNTY MARKERS

Because graves of veterans of all wars buried in and near Xenia will be marked with a universal marker furnished by the county, Foody Post, American Legion, is anxious to obtain precise information on location of graves so that none will be missed, according to William Rickles, member of the post.

Five hundred uniform gray iron markers are being furnished by the county for this year, to be placed at graves in Woodland and the Catholic Cemetery in Xenia; Mercer Cemetery, New Burlington; Pike and Stevenson Cemetery, east of Xenia. Later markers will be provided for Beaver Cemetery.

With the first markers furnished this year, it is planned to mark all of the veterans' graves in Mercer and Stevenson Cemetery and divide the others between Woodland and the Catholic Cemeteries, finishing the work next year or the year following. Permission of cemetery boards will be obtained in each case and Legion members will install the markers, placing the first supply of 500 before Memorial Day.

The markers were designed by William Rickles, and are being made by the Xenia Foundry and Machine Co. They stand on an iron rod which will be imbedded in a cone of cement to guarantee permanence. The top is a double wreath enclosing a star, and is labelled "U. S. Veteran." The marker contains loops in which to insert a flag standard for decoration purposes.

Graves of veterans of all wars will be marked if their locations are obtainable, and for this reason the Legion is asking the assistance of the public. Relatives or friends of deceased veterans are asked to furnish the Legion with the name of the deceased, the cemetery in which he is buried, the section number, lot number and, if possible the grave number. If this information is not available, they are asked to furnish the name and approximate date of burial, so that the Legion can look up the grave location in the cemetery records. The information should be sent to Foody Post, American Legion, in care of the Sheriff's office, Court House, Xenia.

"I Got All the Breaks" Says Boy University President

Hard Work During School Killed Interest in Anything but Work

"MY YOUTH, of course, may be a handicap to me in my new job, the biggest I've ever tackled, but nothing can be done about it." Thus Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of Chicago University at age of 30, treats the question of his age.

For all of his youthful appearance, there is little of the boy about Hutchins. The struggle of his college years and responsibilities beyond his age have killed any "play spirit" he might have had.

Hutchins has a certain humor. He had been called to Washington with Professor Charles E. Clark, of the Law School, to tell President Hoover about his four-year inquiry into the American judicial system now being conducted by the school. He encountered a Justice during his visit.

"So this is the boy 'dean' of Yale," said the Justice. "I suppose you still teach your students that all judges are crazy."

"No," Hutchins replied quietly. "We let them find that out for themselves."

Robert Maynard Hutchins, tall, slight, boyish-faced man, who was secretary of the Yale Corp. at 23, dean of Yale Law School at 28 and now is to be president of the University of Chicago at 30, asserts luck has been the chief factor in his unprecedented educational career.

He professes not to know why the Yale Corp. chose him as secretary before he was graduated from college. He says he can't account for his appointment as dean of Yale Law School soon after his graduation from the school. His appointment as president of the University of Chicago "stunned" him, he says.

Dean Hutchins has no hobbies. His only love is his family—he has a wife and baby daughter. His work is "just a habit," Hutchins says.

"I waited on table, washed dishes, worked in a factory and organized a co-operative tutoring school," he said. "But I wouldn't advise a student to work as hard as I did. It burns up his energy."

If Hutchins has advocated any particular educational theory, it is universally in training for law.

He believes a good lawyer should understand something of psychology, sociology and medicine, and he introduced this theory into practice.

THREE INDICTED IN THEFT CASES PLEAD GUILTY SATURDAY

Roy Swain, 24, Jess Allen, 32, and his brother, Ralph, 21, all of Grape Grove, entered guilty pleas when arraigned in Common Pleas Court Saturday morning on a joint indictment charging them with breaking and entering a chicken house on the farm of Harry Heifner, Federal Pike, with intent to steal, last May 4.

Attorney H. D. Smith, appointed to defend asked the court for suspended sentences. The trio was examined by the court which heard their statements and that of Sheriff Ohmer Tate, Judge R. L. Gowdy deferred sentence in the three cases.

James Blair, indicted for third offense of liquor law violation; Oliver Warwick, charged in an indictment with receiving and concealing stolen property, and Calvin Null, indicted for removing mortgaged property from the county with intent to defraud, each pleaded not guilty when arraigned Saturday morning, but their cases have not been assigned for trial by the court.

John Kenneth Nooks, 30, colored, this city, scheduled to go on trial in Common Pleas Court Monday with his father, Martin Nooks, 60, on a joint indictment for burglary and larceny, charged his plea of not guilty to guilty Saturday. The court postponed sentence pending the outcome of his father's trial. They are accused of stealing twenty fleeces of wool from the farm of Frank Pistick, near Yellow Springs, last April 30.

PAIR ARRESTED ON LIQUOR CHARGES

Affidavits charging them with possessing and transporting liquor were filed in Probate Court Saturday morning against Cable Walls, 24, and Robert Ball, 27, both colored, of Springfield, arrested by police and a prohibition inspector Friday night.

The two colored men were taken into custody at the Pennsylvania viaduct on the Springfield Pike, three miles north of Xenia. Patrolmen Charles Thompson and J. E. Craig and Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, who made the arrests, confiscated five gallon tins of alleged liquor, according to Police Chief M. E. Graham.

The pair pleaded not guilty in Probate Court and bonds in each case were fixed at $600 by Judge S. C. Wright Saturday.

XENIANS TAKE OVER POPULAR RESORT AT SUMMERLAND BEACH

Announcement was made Friday that High G. Ruhlman, former Xenian, Steve Phillips, popular Xenia harness racing starting judge and G. A. Willett, this city, plan to take over the operation of the Summerland Beach Hotel, situated on Buckeye Lake at Millersport, O., this summer.

The attractive hostelry will be opened under the management of the Xenia associates on Decoration Day, May 30 and it will remain open during the summer vacation season, closing on Labor Day next September.

Located eighty-five miles from Xenia, the hotel, considered one of the finest in the vicinity of that resort, accommodates 200 people and has a waterfront stretch of 892 feet, providing facilities for swimming, boating and fishing.

Dancing will also be a feature during the summer months. The hotel has attractive surroundings, and in addition there are picnic grounds and an up-to-date playground for children on the property.

In revealing plans for opening the hotel, Steve Phillips disclosed that he has cancelled a great majority of the engagements on grand circuit and shortship circuit, tracks for which he had been booked for the early summer months.

He has postponed the opening of his season with the harness races until about the middle of June, when he expects to send them away at the Marion, O. shortship circuit meet.

Ruhlman and Phillips have been associated in the operation of a skating rink at Lancaster, O., but recently closed it for the summer months. Ruhlman at one time was manager of the old Lyric skating rink here and also of Kil Kare Park, located three miles west of Xenia.

A Mother's Day Class of Candidates Will Be Initiated Sunday, May 12 At 2 P. M. At Eagles Hall Lunch will follow.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE CURSE OF FELLOWSHIP — Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness.—Habakkuk 2:15.

UNITED STATES AND THE WORLD COURT

Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, famous as an authority on international law and as prosecutor of the Teapot Dome inquiry, says that the time is not far off when the United States will enter the World Court.

Senator Walsh, in the Review of Reviews, bases his prediction on the cordiality with which the Root proposals have been received. They will, he is confident, be approved by the Senate.

The proposals, evolved by Elihu Root in conference with a committee of the Council of the League of Nations, protect American rights in connection with the famous Article V of the League covenant.

Although the Senate has undergone some changes of personnel since adherence to the World Court, with reservations, was voted in 1926, Senator Walsh declares that the changes probably are not to the detriment of the cause of adherence.

"Our original resolution was concurred in on January 27, 1926, by a vote of 76 to 17," he says, "an aggregate quite unusual in my experience in the Senate, there being but three Senators not voting. Accordingly, though there were a loss of twelve when the Root proposal is voted, the requisite two-thirds would still be reached."

Senator Walsh sees the ratification of the Kellogg multilateral treaty renouncing war as another event making for good-will toward the court, and believes that election of Charles Evans Hughes as a justice of the World Court will pare down opposition to adherence in the Republican party.

REASONS FOR CALENDAR CHANGE

The thirteen-month calendar, agitation for which is now being conducted, is endorsed by the accounting profession as a change that will make possible more accurate comparisons of business data, simplify the remembering of dates, and facilitate to a great extent the work of bookkeepers.

Under the present calendar, comparison of the operations for a period in one year with that of another year may be very misleading, for while the same calendar period may be involved, the business situation may be entirely different. Comparing sales of a retail store for May 10 of one year with the sales of May 10 of another year is meaningless today since they fall on different days of the week and are affected by normal differences in sales for the respective days of the week. Furthermore May 10 of one year may be a Sunday so that there will be no basis for comparison at all.

The same applies to weekly figures. In one year there may have been a holiday that fell on a Saturday so that there were only five working days in that week. In the next year, the holiday may come on a Sunday and hence will not be officially celebrated until the succeeding Monday, with the result that as for the particular week there will be six working days against five.

Likewise in comparing monthly figures. April in one year may have five Saturdays and in another year four Saturdays. Where Saturday is a big day, it is obvious that comparing the business of one April with that of another cannot be really significant.

All of this is overcome by the thirteen-month calendar. Each month will contain 28 days or four complete weeks, and no more. February 12 in one year, if it is a Tuesday, will also be a Tuesday in every other year. Comparison therefore will be exact.

The World And All

THE MAIL
This mail from readers gets lost amid the wreckage on the top of my desk, but every once or twice a year I clean house. Just now I'm cleaning house in preparation for a trip to Europe. I can't leave my desk like this while I go so far away. I find some dandy letters.

Here's one from a young man who marks it "strictly confidential," so I won't mention either his name or his town. He wants to offer himself as a subject for medical experimentation. All he wants for remuneration is money. He's been reading my pleas for convicts for the doctors to experiment upon, and he asks whether a young man who isn't a convict wouldn't be worth something to the doctors. I don't know. Let's see whether any doctors snap at the bait.

E. C. Hartwell, superintendent of schools at Buffalo, writes to say that he likes to read my articles. He says it much more flatteringly than that, but then I presume that's because he's a nice fellow who likes to make writers happy.

Cyrus Falconer, of East Aurora, N. Y., writes to ask me to bring him a double-brook from Spain. If I find any pirate treasure there, Falconer is a Boy Scout executive, and I once talked to a group of his boys about buried treasure. And one of the brightest audiences I ever had, too.

A note from H. E. Jameyson, Wichita, Kas., saying the home town is all steamed up about one or more of my magazine articles. Well, I wrote two thousand words a day for five years in the home town, trying to steam 'em up, and the thermometer stood at thirty-two all the time. Stand well away from your boiler when you shovelful in your stuff, and the steam rises faster.

SONG OF THYRSIS

THE turtle on your withered bough,
That lately mourned her murdered mate,
Has found another comrade now,
Such changes all await!

Again her drooping plume is dressed,
Again she's waiting to be blest,
And takes her lover to her nest.

If nature has decreed it so,
With all above, and all below,
Let us like them forget our woes,
And not be killed with sorrow.

I should quit your arms tonight,
And chance to die before 'twas light,
I would advise you—and you might—
Love again tomorrow.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

1900 AGAINST 1929

Frank E. O'Hara, Chicago professor of English, bids us turn and remember what we were in 1900. He says today's students are brighter than their parents. Try to think back and recall what you knew about men and events and the world when you were a youngster, and then consider what your young man or young woman knows today. One thing is certain—there is certainly a much larger stock of loose, useless information now than there was then. Professor O'Hara says:

"One of the most significant changes in the modern student is the broadening of his background of general information."

"The interests of members of the football squad used to be confined almost exclusively to athletics and to the concrete and prosaic facts which they learned in their classrooms."

"But almost any college football player now can tell you about O'Neill, Sahr, symphony music, Lomax Taft, or any other prominent figure in any of the arts."

"The class of 1929 is inclined to be more frank, liberal and tolerant than their predecessors of 1900."

"Personal interest in literature, the drama and fine music is respected. A student who was an enthusiast in any branch of the arts used to be regarded on the campus as a freak."

"Students are suspicious of traditions, taboos and precedents. Their inquiring spirit may approach cynicism, but they are anxious to obtain unvarnished information."

A GREAT BUYER

When former Senator John Simon Guggenheim set up a memorial foundation in 1925, in memory of his son and put $3,000,000 in it, he made a glorious investment. The purpose of the foundation is "to improve the quality of education and the practice of the arts and professions in the United States, to foster research and to provide for the cause of international understanding."

Could there be a worthier, nobler purpose for spending money? Just a few days ago grants of $180,000 from the fund were made to a number of scholars and artists to assist them in carrying on study and research.

Among those who have helped from the foundation are Professor Compton, who won the Nobel prize in physics for 1928, and the poet Benet, who wrote "John Brown's Body." That's paying real dividends.

SETTLEMENT OF FREEDOM OF THE SEAS URGED

By RAMSEY MACDONALD
British Labor Leader and Former Premier

James Ramsey MacDonald was born at Loosmouth, Morayshire, October 12, 1866. He received his education at a boarding school. Married Margaret Gladstone in 1896 and has two sons and three daughters. He was a member of the London County Council in 1901 and was at one time editor of the Socialist Review. Served as Labor member of Parliament from 1906-18. From January to November, 1924, he filled the posts of Prime Minister, First Lord of the Treasury, and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

We must frankly accept conciliation and arbitration in international disputes. We must in particular deal with that old, historical war-creating problem—the freedom of the seas—and when we do it we must bring our minds and intelligences up to date. The freedom of the seas must be settled and the naval agreement with America.

European settlement, European peace, the establishment of a psychology of neighborliness, the friendliness of man to man, mutual confidence and the capacity to put cards on the table and to keep to one's sleeves—all are absolutely impossible with Russia beyond the pale. Therefore, I say that if Russia had committed ten thousand times the faults and crimes than even they say she has committed, Russia would never be left out by any calm, far-seeing and understanding man in this country.

Disjoint a chicken, season and cook slowly in a small amount of water about the bones and cut into thick pieces about two inches long. At the same time have on hand one green pepper, one pimento, two cups chicken broth, two or three tablespoons flour, one-half pound fresh mushrooms, two egg yolks or one whole egg, butter, one cup rich milk, salt, pepper, paprika. Sauté the mushrooms and add to chicken. Blend the butter and flour and add the chicken broth slowly, and the milk. When this is cooked through add the chicken and mushrooms. Chop the green pepper and pimento fine and add them. Also season to taste. Just before serving heat slightly the two egg yolks, add a tablespoon of other mixture to them and return the mixture to the pan and cook for three minutes after adding the eggs.

FARM RELIEF THAT IS FARM RELIEF

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

There is still another way beside exercise to make too fat legs grow slim—an easy, more rapid, though no more effective way than exercise. It is the way of fat-dissolving soap and balsam preparations.

While I always recommend exercises as the simplest, most natural and least expensive way to beautiful body contours, there are times when a more artificial means is not to be despised. Reducing soap and jelly may be used in conjunction with the exercise, to hasten good effects, or they may be used by themselves—both together or either separately, to get the same results.

If you are impatient, and want to take off an inch or so, literally, around the calves of your legs or ankles in the quickest possible time, or if the smooth planes of your knees are hidden under pads of fatty flesh, by all means try the use of a good reducing soap.

But beware of ineffective preparations. Remember that there are a great many such products which claim to be fat solvents and are really of little use in any plan of reduction. Buy a reputable reducing soap and use it in the following way, and if it is effective, you should soon see results.

Take the cake into your bath and on the moistened surface that you wish to reduce, rub it vigorously until a foamy lather has been created. Cover the surface with the lather completely and let it stay on 15 or 20 minutes, or as long as you can, massaging the surface during the time. Then wash it off, and after drying yourself, pat in reducing jelly to complete the absorption of superfluous fat.

Remember that only excess pads of flesh should be removed. The girth of the leg and ankle depends primarily upon its bony structure, and a really beautiful leg must have enough flesh upon it to softly cover the angular lines of the inner joints. Mere thinness, especially if the bones are large, does not guarantee attractive contours.

And here is a hint for legs—particularly knees—that are blemished with coarse, roughened skin or goose pimples. Scrub the skin vigorously with a fine nail brush and a bland, soft soap. The reducing soap will do the trick if you are reducing, since it stimulates the circulation and faulty circulation is usually the cause of these blemishes. Vigorous brushing or massaging is also excellent. After it, anoint the stippled skin with a bleaching cream or a soft cleansing cream or body oil that has more lubricating than nourishing properties.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — In the whole executive branch of the government service in Washington it is doubtful if any other official in a generation has made so brilliant a success of his particular job as Dr. Julius Klein, at the head of the foreign and domestic commerce bureau of the commerce department during the last eight years.

New President Hoover has promoted the doctor to the assistant commerce secretaryship.

Anyway, theoretically, it was a promotion. Practically, one can only wonder why in the dickens Dr. Klein failed to get the cabinet portfolio itself. The assistant secretaryship looks so much smaller than one would have thought he deserved that it hardly seems like a promotion at all.

The doctor was mentioned as a cabinet probability before Robert P. Lamont was appointed commerce department chief. One could have understood the former's retirement from public office altogether, for the sake of more money in some private position—since Dr. Klein is not a rich man. However, evidently that is not it, inasmuch as he stays with the government, under Secretary Lamont.

There was talk of his transfer to the White House executive offices, as a member of President Hoover's personal staff; and that would have been comprehensible, too—on the ground that Mr. Hoover simply could not do without him, near at hand.

Had he even remained in charge of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, the explanation that he was too valuable to be spared from the berth he virtually had created might have sounded reasonable.

But his so-called "promotion" to the department's assistant secretaryship? Yes, he plainly felt that the secretaryship was a promotion. Under the circumstances, that sort of promotion is pretty suggestive of the idea that President Hoover wanted the doctor in a place where all the work and responsibility would fall on his shoulders, but preferred not to decorate him with the supreme secretarial title.

Not is it very difficult to understand why not—if that account for it.

Dr. Klein lacks the merest thimbleful of political influence.

He represents no particular section of the country. Originally he came from California, but left there when he was young and never has established himself in a college professor's rather intangible residence anywhere else. Indeed, he has spent a good deal of his time abroad.

He is not a big business man—or identified with any big commercial or financial interest.

He is on the "outside" of everything.

All that Dr. Klein has to recommend him is that he really is a wonderfully able man—the "goods"—and then some.

But he went to work for the government before he had had an opportunity to prove what was in him—except to a few university faculties—of course entirely unknown to either the world of politics or the world of trade. In the government service, itself, he took over what was not an especially important position until he made it important.

Even so, President Hoover does not appear to have reckoned it important enough to count as an asset of cabinet size.

There is no question that the President greatly likes Dr. Klein and estimates his ability at its full value.

He undoubtedly expects the doctor to run the commerce department. He plainly felt that the secretaryship was a promotion. Under the circumstances, that better advantage on some other shirt front.

To be sure, Secretary Lamont is no politician, but he does qualify as a big business man. He gives the impression of being an easy-going one. Maybe Mr. Hoover chose him in part, rather than someone else, because he sized him up as likely to be satisfied with cabinet honors, while letting Dr. Klein alone to do everything else.

It is a very nice arrangement for all concerned—possibly excepting Dr. Klein.

Perhaps it suits him. Perhaps not. By quitting the government cold, he certainly is in a position now to cash in, for some billion-dollar corporation, in a big way. If he likes decorations himself, he must be sore. If the sense of accomplishment in his own handiwork he craves, with others grabbing off all the credit, the government assuredly can stand it as long as he can.

Household Hints

BY MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT
Tomato Soup
Liver and Bacon
Riced Potatoes
Cabbage Salad
Hot Water Gingerbread
Coffee

This is a very economical meal, if you substitute beef or pork liver for calf's.

Today's Recipes.

Cabbage Salad.—For a cabbage salad which is different, try shredded cabbage to which a small amount of minced onion has been added and one tablespoon of chopped peanuts to each cup of cabbage. Moistened with mayonnaise. Garnish with strips of sweet pickles.

Hot-Water Gingerbread.—Melt one-half cup fat in one-half cup boiling water, and add one cup molasses. Stir together the following dry ingredients and add them to the above mixture: Two and one-half cups flour, one and one-fourth teaspoons ginger, one teaspoon soda, and one-half teaspoon salt. Beat well. Put in a greased pan and bake in a moderate oven about 25 minutes.

The family may be allowed to spread butter on this gingerbread.

SUGGESTIONS

Bedtime "Snacks"
For the sake of health and economy, eating between meals should be discouraged. The refreshments served at social gatherings often constitute a fourth meal, but there are careful people who make allowance for this in either the noon or evening meal. These precautions will avoid over-eating and its dire consequences.

Three meals a day are sufficient for the average person, but the snack just before bedtime is quite indispensable in many homes. If dinner is served between five and six and you do not retire before midnight you may be in need of that fourth meal, for no one should go to bed hungry, neither should any one retire with an overloaded stomach, so the fourth meal should be a snack and not a banquet.

A glass of milk and rolls, toasted bread or tasty crackers with perhaps jelly or some fresh fruit will allay hunger and not retard sleep. While a salad or sandwiches and coffee may taste delicious, the sleep that follows is not the refreshing kind that provides pep for the next day's duties.

Important Trifles.
If the kitchen work table is too low, raise with rubber rollers.

Arrange utensils and supplies in the kitchen so as to save steps.

Have a knife sharpener handy.

To save time when making potato, asparagus, or any cream of vegetable soup, use the potato ricer.

To run the commerce department. He plainly felt that the secretaryship was a promotion. Under the circumstances, that sort of promotion is pretty suggestive of the idea that President Hoover wanted the doctor in a place where all the work and responsibility would fall on his shoulders, but preferred not to decorate him with the supreme secretarial title.

Not is it very difficult to understand why not—if that account for it.

Dr. Klein lacks the merest thimbleful of political influence.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D. AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Catching Cold

"Do you hold with one of your colleagues who writes that drafts, getting the feet wet, and chilling, will not cause what is known as a cold?"

No, I do not, B. Emphatically, I do not.

There is no doubt that in all colds there is an infection due to germs. If there is a specific type, it hasn't been tracked down yet. Perhaps the ordinary germs that are on the mucous membranes are the culprits and are harmless unless they can gain a foothold on lowered resistance.

There are types of acute, infectious colds that are easily transferable, even, perhaps, when the resistance is high. We've all blown through 'em. But there are also types—and I believe that one that might be brought on after drafts and wetting to the point of chilling, is in that class—that are not so infectious. The experience of coming down with a cold after such happenings is so common that it cannot be considered a coincidence. And we have scientific data from research work on animals which show that chilling and wetting, if prolonged enough to lower the resistance so that infectious germs can multiply. For instance, chickens are ordinarily immune to anthrax germs (germs that are deadly to sheep). But lower their body temperature by keeping their feet in cold water for some period, and then let them get a dose of anthrax germs and they contract the disease.

Yes, chilling in man, I believe is one of the agents that lowers resistance to colds. After being chilled to the noticeable point for a period, one should soon as possible take a good heating bath, long enough to raise the temperature of the body. This helps to kill off the activated germs.

No doubt those who do take cold easily from drafts and wet feet have an habitual lowered resistance which they should try to raise, so these agents are not effective—or at least much less effective—by improving their hygienic program. Gradually accustoming themselves to daily cold water and air baths, increasing their exercise to improve their circulation, and seeing that their diets are correct, are measures that should be considered.

We have an article on Colds, Catarrh, Asthma, etc., and on a Balanced Diet which you may have by following column rules.

"I am a young girl. I have a space between my two upper teeth which is very noticeable. My teeth otherwise are in perfect condition and are even. One dentist told me he could fill this space with a porcelain filling but that he would have to do work on the separated teeth in order to hold it in. Do you think I should have this done? And if I do, will the process hurt the two teeth?"

It would depend upon the skill of your dentist, M., and the durability and hardness of your teeth after they were fixed. This depends on their care and your diet. If it is just a small opening, I don't believe I would have it done. Perhaps you are supersensitive about it.

Have you had an X-ray to see if there is a tooth in the jaw which has never grown in? If there should be, a skillful orthodontist (a dentist who specializes in straightening teeth) by special methods can draw it gradually down into place.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

What does it mean to be a friend? Well, what do you demand of your friends? They must forgive you many thoughtless words and deeds, mustn't they? They must overlook some disagreeable traits of character. Did you ever get a glimpse of yourself after you had made a blunder of some sort of which a friend was the victim, and visually just how lacking you are in certain qualities and how much your friends have to overlook? I do, every once in a while. It's not so pleasant, but it's mighty salutary. Makes one quite charitable toward others for a time, at least.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have been reading your column for some time and I have been getting advice from it indirectly which has helped me a lot. I have a problem that I have been trying to solve for some time, but I find that I, too, need your advice.

"Now, I am a girl who, I might say, wishes for nothing. I have a car and I am popular with my sex and the other also, but there is one thing that I really want advice on. I have been going with a young man for two months whom I love very much, and he says he loves me, but during all this time he has never taken me anywhere, not even to a show.

I have become engaged to him and have promised to marry him, but I have no ring. He is afraid that he would not be able to get me a ring that I would like me to have. I am planning a theater party and want to invite him, but yet I don't feel that I should have him when he never takes me to anything, therefore I want to invite another fellow. Don't you think that is all right? He is very jealous of me and says I am too popular with other fellows, but if he doesn't show me a good time someone else will. Please advise me what to do. I hope I haven't bored you.

"PUZZLED JOE."

You certainly haven't bored me. I want to advise you to break with this chap before you go any further. My experience has been that of all humiliating and heartbreaking faults that of penuriousness is the worst. I have all the sympathy in the world for a boy who has his own way to make and as to economy. Sometimes girls especially those who are well off, do not realize the difficulties of such a boy and he gets the idea that all girls expect him to spend a lot of money on them—are gold diggers—and he goes without girl friends rather than be thought stingy. But this chap seems to me selfish and plain tight. You'll never be happy married to him. He will accept everything from you and hold on to every nickel, making his wife feel like a beggar if she needs money for even necessities, and the children will only think of such a father as a horrible example. When a man is stingy with a girl he is courting, she may be sure he will be twice as tight with a wife. Invite the other fellow to your party—some one who has given you a good time. Several severe jolts may wake your fiancé up to his faults, if he isn't hopeless.

"Dear Virginia Lee: Is there anything wrong in petting?"

"LOVER."

If by petting you mean showing affection to one you love, caressing them, there is no harm in it if you don't go too far. But if you mean "petting" with every boy you go with and spending your evenings cuddled down in a corner of the family davenport, then it is wrong, for it cheapens the girl in the eyes of young men whom she permits to take the privilege of a lover, and when the Real One comes along you will regret having thus wasted your affection on others.

Peter's Adventures

BY MRS. FLORENCE VINCENT

MAKE-BELIEVE LEGS—

MAKE-BELIEVE LEGS—

Loon shuffled his feet, still looking down sadly upon them.

"These aren't much good to me, these make-believe legs of mine. Why in the world they had to be set so far back on my body I can't imagine. You don't know how it tires me to get over the ground."

Loon looked to Peter for sympathy. "My poor breast fairly aches sometimes from the bumping it gets as I scurry on the stones. But I can't manage to move any other way. I don't like the land, anyhow. The water for me, every time. That's my natural home and if I am clumsy on shore I make up for it in the waves, if I do say it myself."

The boy thought that here was a bird after his own heart. Seldom had he met with one so good natured and ready to talk, and he was going to ask him a few questions, when from somewhere in the gathering twilight above them came the long weird cry that Peter had come to recognize. At the sound Loon cackled with delight.

"The Loons are coming! Hurrah! hurrah!" cried he. "They have heard my calls and are speeding up for the race."

"That was the voice of 'Swift-as-an-Arrow' or I am very much mistaken, and he will get to the water before I do, if I don't hurry. Watch that bird take the spiral glide. It is a great sight. I tell you. Not many Loons can do it as gracefully as he—he is the head of our clan and as wise

as he is brave, a Loon among Loons."

"Be sure to notice the youngsters come down to earth. They are half afraid to alight on the water and it's the funniest sight in the world to see them. And then the races! I won last night. By-ho, folks. Wish me luck. I can choose the fishing grounds

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE CURSE OF FELLOWSHIP — Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness.—Habakkuk 2:15.

UNITED STATES AND THE WORLD COURT

Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, famous as an authority on international law and as prosecutor of the Teapot Dome inquiry, says that the time is not far off when the United States will enter the World Court.

Senator Walsh, in the Review of Reviews, bases his prediction on the cordiality with which the Root proposals have been received. They will, he is confident, be approved by the Senate.

The proposals, evolved by Elihu Root in conference with a committee of the Council of the League of Nations, protect American rights in connection with the famous Article V of the League covenant.

Although the Senate has undergone some changes of personnel since adherence to the World Court, with reservations, was voted in 1926, Senator Walsh declares that the changes probably are not to the detriment of the cause of adherence.

"Our original resolution was concurred in on January 27, 1926, by a vote of 76 to 17," he says, "an aggregate quite unusual in my experience in the Senate, there being but three Senators not voting. Accordingly, though there were a loss of twelve when the Root proposal is voted, the requisite two-thirds would still be reached."

Senator Walsh sees the ratification of the Kellogg multilateral treaty renouncing war as another event making for good-will toward the court, and believes that election of Charles Evans Hughes as a justice of the World Court will pare down opposition to adherence in the Republican party.

REASONS FOR CALENDAR CHANGE

The thirteen-month calendar, agitation for which is now being conducted, is endorsed by the accounting profession as a change that will make possible more accurate comparisons of business data, simplify the remembering of dates, and facilitate to a great extent the work of bookkeepers.

Under the present calendar, comparison of the operations for a period in one year with that of another year may be very misleading, for while the same calendar period may be involved, the business situation may be entirely different. Comparing sales of a retail store for May 10 of one year with the sales of May 10 of another year is meaningless today since they fall on different days of the week and are affected by normal differences in sales for the respective days of the week. Furthermore May 10 of one year may be a Sunday so that there will be no basis for comparison at all.

The same applies to weekly figures. In one year there may have been a holiday that fell on a Saturday so that there were only five working days in that week. In the next year, the holiday may come on a Sunday and hence will not be officially celebrated until the succeeding Monday, with the result that as for the particular week there will be six working days against five.

Likewise in comparing monthly figures, April in one year may have five Saturdays and in another year four Saturdays. Where Saturday is a big day, it is obvious that comparing the business of one April with that of another cannot be really significant.

All of this is overcome by the thirteen-month calendar. Each month will contain 28 days or four complete weeks, and no more. February 12 in one year, if it is a Tuesday, will also be a Tuesday in every other year. Comparison therefore will be exact.

THE MAIL
This mail from readers gets lost amid the wreckage on the top of my desk, but every once in a while I clean house. Just now I'm cleaning house in preparation for a trip to Europe. I don't leave my desk like this while I go so far away. I find some dandy letters.

Here's one from a young man who marks it "strictly confidential." So I won't mention either his name or his town. He wants to offer himself as a subject for medical experimentation. All he wants for remuneration is money. He's been reading my pleas for convicts for the doctors to experiment upon, and he asks whether a young man who isn't a convict wouldn't be worth something to the doctors. I don't know. Let's see whether any doctors snap at the bait.

E. C. Hartwell, superintendent of schools at Buffalo, writes to say that he likes to read my articles. He says it much more flatteringly than that, but then I presume that's because he's a nice fellow who likes to make writers happy.

Cyrus Falconer, of East Aurora, N. Y., writes to ask me to bring him a doubleton back from Spain. If I find any private treasure there, Falconer is a Boy Scout executive, and I once talked to a group of his boys about buried treasure. And one of the brightest audiences I ever had, too.

A note from H. E. Jameyson, Wichita, Kas., saying the home town is all steamed up about one or more of my magazine articles. Well, I wrote two thousand words a day for five years in the home

SONG OF THYRSIS

THE turtle on your withered bough,
That lately mourned her murdered mate,
Has found another comrade now,
For such changes all await!
Again her drooping plume is drest,
And takes her lover to her nest.

If nature has decreed it so
With all above, and all below,
Let us like them forget our woes,
And not be killed with sorrow.
I should quit your arms tonight
And chance to die before 'twas light.
I would advise you—and you might—
Love again tomorrow.

The Way of the World

1900 AGAINST 1929

Frank E. O'Hara, Chicago professor of English, bids us turn and remember what the world was in 1900. He says today's students are brighter than their parents. Try to think back and recall what you knew about men and events and the world when you were a young man or young woman knows today. One thing is certain—there is certainly a much larger stock of loose, useless information now than there was then. Professor O'Hara says:

"One of the most significant changes in the modern student is the broadening of his background of general information.

"The interests of members of the football squad used to be confined almost exclusively to athletics and to the concrete and prosaic facts which they learned in their classrooms.

"But almost any college football player now can tell you about O'Neill, Shaw, symphony music, Lorado Taft, or any other prominent figure in any of the arts.

"The class of 1929 is inclined to be more frank, liberal and tolerant than their predecessors of 1900.

"Personal interest in literature, the drama and fine music is respected. A student who was an enthusiast in any branch of the arts used to be regarded on the campus as a freak.

"Students are suspicious of traditions, taboos and precedents. Their inquiring spirit may approach cynicism, but they are anxious to obtain unvarnished information."

When former Senator John Simon Guggenheim set up a memorial foundation in 1925, in memory of his son and put $3,500,000 in it, he made a glorious investment. The purpose of the foundation is "to improve the quality of education and the practice of the arts and professions in the United States, to foster research and to provide for the cause of international understanding."

Could there be a worthier, nobler purpose for spending money? Just a few years ago grants of $180,000 from the fund were made to a number of scholars and artists to assist them in carrying on study and research.

Among those who have had help from the foundation are Professor Compton, who won the Nobel prize in physics for 1928, and the poet Benoit who wrote "John Brown's Body." That's paying real dividends.

James Ramsey MacDonald was born at Loomis, Mo., October 12, 1886. He received his education at a boarding school, married Margaret Gladstone in 1896 and has two sons and three daughters. He was a member of the London County Council in 1901 and was at one time editor of the Socialist Review. Served as Labor member of Parliament from 1906-18.

From January to November, in 1924, he filled the posts of Prime Minister, First Lord of the Treasury, and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

We must frankly accept conciliation and arbitration in international disputes. We must in particular deal with that old, historical war-making problem—the freedom of the seas—and when we do it we must bring our minds and intelligences up to date. The freedom of the seas must be settled and the naval agreement with America.

European settlement, European peace, the establishment of a psychology of neighborliness, the friendliness of man to man, mutual confidence and the capacity to put the cards on the table and to keep one's sleeves—all are absolutely impossible with Russia beyond the pale. Therefore, I say that if Russia had committed ten thousand times the faults and crimes than even they say she has committed, Russia would never be left out by any calm, far-seeing and understanding man in this country.

How to Achieve Beauty

There is still another way beside exercise to make too fat legs grow slim—an easy, more rapid, though no more effective way than exercise. It is the way of fat-dissolving soap and balsam preparations.

While I always recommend exercises as the simplest, most natural and least expensive way to beautiful body contours, there are times when a more artificial means is not to be despised. Reducing soap and jelly may be used in conjunction with the exercise, to hasten good effects, or they may be used by themselves—both together or either separately, to get the same results.

If you are impatient, and want to take off an inch or so, literally, around the calves of your legs or ankles in the quickest possible time, or if the smooth planes of your knees are hidden under pads of fatty flesh, by all means try the use of a good reducing soap.

But beware of ineffective preparations. Remember that there are a great many such products made which claim to be fat solvents and are really of little use in any plan of reduction. Buy a reputable reducing soap and use it in the following way, and if it is effective, you should soon see results.

Take the cake into your bath and on the moistened surface that you wish to reduce, rub it vigorously until a foamy lather has been created. Cover the surface with the lather completely and let it stay on 15 or 20 minutes, or as long as you can, massaging the surface during the time. Then wash it off, and after drying yourself, pat in reducing jelly to complete the absorption of superfluous fat.

Remember that only excess pads of flesh should be removed. The girth of the leg and ankle depends primarily upon its bony structure, and a really beautiful leg must have enough flesh upon it to softly cover the angular lines of the inner joints. Mere thinness, especially if the bones are large, does not guarantee attractive contours.

And here is a hint for legs—particularly knees—that are blemished with coarse, roughened skin or goose pimples. Scrub the skin vigorously with a fine nail brush and a bland soft soap. The reducing soap will do the trick if you are reducing, since it stimulates the circulation and faulty circulation is usually the cause of these blemishes. Vigorous brushing or massaging is also excellent. After it, anoint the stimulated skin with a bleaching cream or a soft cleansing cream or body oil that has more lubricating than nourishing properties.

Now President Hoover has promoted the doctor to the assistant commerce secretaryship.

Anyway, theoretically, it was a promotion. Practically, one can only wonder why in the dickens Dr. Klein failed to get the cabinet portfolio itself. The assistant secretaryship looks so much smaller than one would have thought he deserved that it hardly seems like a promotion at all.

The doctor was mentioned as a cabinet probability before Robert P. Lamont was appointed commerce department chief.

One could have understood the former's retirement from public office altogether, for the sake of more money in some private position—since Dr. Klein is not a rich man. However, evidently that is not it, inasmuch as he stays with the government, under Secretary Lamont.

There was talk of his transfer to the White House executive offices, as a member of President Hoover's personal staff; and that would have been comprehensible, too—on the ground that Mr. Hoover simply could not do without him, near at hand.

Had he even remained in charge of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, the explanation that he was too valuable to be spared from the berth he virtually had created might have sounded reasonable.

Yet he plainly felt that the secretarial decoration would show to

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D. AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Catching Cold
"Do you hold with one of your colleagues who writes that drafts, getting the feet wet, and chilling, will not cause what is known as a cold?"

No, I do not, B. Emphatically, I do not.

There is no doubt that in all colds there is an infection due to germs. If there is a specific type, it hasn't been tracked down yet. Perhaps the ordinary germs that are on the mucous membranes are the culprits and are harmless unless they can gain a foothold from lowered resistance.

There are types of acute, infectious colds that are easily transferable, even, perhaps, when the resistance is high. We've all blown through 'em. But there are also types—and I believe that one that might be brought on after drafts and wetting to the point of chilling, is in that class—that are not so infectious. The experience of coming down with a cold after such happenings is so common that it cannot be considered a coincidence. And we have scientific data from research work on animals which show that chilling and wetting, if prolonged enough to lower the body temperature, do lower the resistance so that infectious germs can multiply. For instance, chickens are ordinarily immune to anthrax germs (germs that are deadly to sheep). But lower their body temperature by keeping their feet in cold water for some period, and then let them get a dose of anthrax germs and they contract the disease.

Yes, chilling in man, I believe is one of the agents that lowers resistance to colds. After being chilled to the noticeable point for a period, one should as soon as possible take a good heating bath, long enough to raise the temperature of the body. This helps to kill off the activated germs.

No doubt those who do take cold easily from drafts and wet feet have an habitual lowered resistance which they should try to raise, so these agents are not effective—or at least much less effective—by improving their hygienic program. Gradually accustoming themselves to daily cold water and air baths, increasing their exercise to improve their circulation, and seeing that their diets are correct, are measures that should be considered.

We have an article on Colds, Catarrh, Asthma, etc., and one on Balanced Diet which you may have by following column rules.

"I am a young girl. I have a space between my two upper teeth which is very noticeable. My teeth otherwise are in perfect condition and are even. One dentist told me he could fill this space with a porcelain filling but that he would have to do work on the separated teeth in order to hold it in. Do you think I should have this done? And if I do, will the process hurt the two teeth?"

It would depend upon the skill of your dentist, M., and the durability and hardness of your teeth after they were fixed. This depends on their care and your diet. If it is just a small opening, I don't believe I would have it done. Perhaps you are supersensitive about it.

Have you had an X-ray to see if there is a tooth in the jaw which has never grown in? If there should be, a skillful orthodontist (a dentist who specializes in straightening teeth) by special methods can draw it gradually down into place.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have been reading your column for some time and I have been getting advice from it indirectly which has helped me a lot. I have a problem that I have been trying to solve for some time, but I find that I, too, need your advice.

"Now, I am a girl who, I might say, wishes for nothing. I have a car and I am popular with my sex and the other also, but there is one thing that I really want advice on. I have been going with a young man for two months whom I love very much, and he says he loves me, but during all this time he has never taken me anywhere, not even to a show. I have become engaged to him and have promised to marry him, but I have no ring. He is afraid that he would not be able to get me a ring that he would like me to have. I am planning a theater party and want to invite him, but yet I don't feel that I should have him when he never takes me to anything, therefore I want to invite another fellow. Don't you think that is all right? He is very jealous of me and says I am too popular with other fellows, but if he doesn't show me a good time someone else will. Please advise me what to do. I hope I haven't bored you.

"PUZZLED JOE."

You certainly haven't bored me dear. I want to advise you to break with this chap before you

Peter's Adventures
BY MRS. J. DUNCAN SMITH VINCENT

MAKE-BELIEVE LEGS—
MAKE-BELIEVE LEGS!
Loon shuffled his feet, still looking down sadly upon them. "They aren't much good to me, these make-believe legs of mine. Why in the world they had to be set so far back on my body I can't imagine. You don't know how it times me to get over the ground," he looked to Peter for sympathy. "My poor breast fairly aches sometimes from the bumping it gets as I see it on the stones. But I can't manage to move any other way. I don't like the land, anyhow. The water, for me, every time! That is my natural home and if I am clumsy on shore I make up for it in the waves, if I do say it myself."

The boy thought that here was a bird after his own heart. Seldom had he met with one so good natured and ready to talk, and he was just going to ask him a few questions, when from somewhere in the gathering twilight above them came the long weird cry that Peter had come to recognize. At the sound Loon cackled with delight.

"Hi! Loons are coming! hurrah! hurrah!" cried he. "They have heard my call and are speeding up for the races."

"That was the voice of 'Swift' as an Arrow' or I am very much mistaken, and he will get to the water before I do, if I don't hurry. Watch that bird take the signal flag. It is a great sight. I tell you. Not many Loons can do it as gracefully as he—he is the head of our clan and as wise

as he is brave, a Loon among Loons.

"Be sure to notice the youngsters come down to earth. They are half afraid to alight on the water and it's the funniest sight in the world to see them. And then the races! I won last night. By-by, folks. Wish me luck. I can choose the fishing grounds for the rest of the week if I come in a length ahead."

The friendly Loon started off towards the lake tumbling and flopping his way down the sloping bank in such a comical fashion that in spite of the fact he looked the fellow very much and wouldn't hurt his feelings for the world, Peter could not help gazing. The Loon heard him and turned around.

"Laugh while you can Two-Legs," said he. "I don't blame you, for I know, myself, I do cut a queer figure on the land. In a minute, though, your laughing will be at an end and you will be thinking I am the most wonderful swimmer you have ever seen. I am proud of what I can do in the water and I'll bet you anything you want to risk that you have never seen any beast, bird or fish with a body as light as mine and any quicker than I can. Just keep your eyes on me, that's all, and you'll never make fun of again."

"By the way, when you go back to your own people you might tell them that a Loon is not as crazy as they seem to think he is."

WHALE SCHOOL OF 50

EUREKA, Cal., May 11.—One of the largest school of whales seen off the coast near here in recent years was reported a few days ago by Captain Willard Cousins. Cousins said there appeared to be about fifty of the marine monsters in the school. The spouts thrown up by the whales, according to Cousins, resembled a field of geysers.

HUNDREDS of stars in the pretty sky,
Hundreds of shells on the shore together,

Hundreds of birds in the sunny weather.

Hundreds of butterflies on the lawn,
But only one mother the wide world over.

POST OFFICE TEAM BEATS H. & A. IN AMERICAN LEAGUE CONTEST

In a wild and woolly game the Post Office nine nosed out a victory over the H. and A. team by a score of 13 to 17 in an American League softball game Friday night at Cox Memorial Athletic field. The game had been postponed from the previous Monday.

Scoring eight runs in the first inning and four more in the second, the post office saw this lead whittled away when the H. and A. tallied five times in the first stanza, then added two in the second, one in the third and four in the fourth to tie the score at 12 to 12.

FAYETTE COUNTIAN COMMITTS SUICIDE; WORRY IS BLAMED

Grover Roy Davids, 46, prominent stock buyer of Fayette County, ended his life Friday afternoon by firing a shotgun charge into his heart in a barn on his farm on the Palmer Road near the Center Church four miles west of Plymouth in Fayette County.

The body was discovered in a stall in the rear of the barn about 5 p. m. by his brother, R. J. Davids, Bowersville, who investigated when he found a letter addressed to Wayne Zimmerman, a helper of Davids, in which he made a disposition of his property and gave directions for funeral arrangements.

Relatives assign worry over financial matters as a motive for the act, declaring that Davids had been in good health. It is believed Davids committed suicide about noon Friday.

His wife preceded him in death three years ago and since that time Davids had been living most of the time at the Cherry Hotel in Washington, C. H.

Surviving is one brother, R. J. Davids, Bowersville, and three sisters, Mrs. Ella Brown, Fayette County; Mrs. Dora Babb, Wilmington; and Mrs. Harkless Glass, Richwood, Union County, O.

Private funeral services will be conducted at the farm residence at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Friends may call at the home anytime after 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon until Sunday noon. Burial will be made in Fayette County.

The third meeting of the West Jefferson Kennel Club, Ltd., will begin at Club Park, West Jefferson, Saturday night, May 18, it is announced.

The management has booked nearly 150 greyhounds from central Ohio owners and a similar number from Western states for the opening races. Twenty schooling races will be held each evening of May 14, 15 and 16 beginning at 7:15 o'clock, for which there will be no extra charge, it is announced.

AKRON, O., May 11.—Charles Taylor, 62, of Columbus, is dead here from injuries received when a machine driven by Larry Mirko, 21, Pittsburgh, crashed into a truck on Canton Road and overturned in a ditch.

READ THIS FIRST:
The plot concerns some weird underground noises beneath a supposedly haunted house in Byford Moor. One day, Brown, a romantic young clerk, overhears a rough looking man say to another: "After her! And if she's troublesome—don't be particular what you do to her!" Brown trails the girl, whose name, he learns, is Jocelyn, to the house. His companions are Rupert and Charlie. Brown disappears. Rupert and Charlie suspect Simon Brill knows the secret of the house. They trail him. Charlie meets Celina, a professor's daughter, and falls in love with her. Celina has promised to meet Charlie in the village tea room and explain some of the mystery.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXVIII
Rupert glanced at his watch. "You've got a couple more minutes, old chap. That tea shop is only just around the corner—I noticed it on my way to the photographer's. Listen! We've got five points against Simon Brill. It is worth while going to the police with any of them?"

"We might sound a bit silly," muttered Charlie.

"In addition, we'd be wasting time," added Rupert, "because there's no police station in this village, and I don't believe there's one for at least ten miles. He pined for an instant while the narrow on the lawn suddenly lost its serenity, and flew away. A car had passed the inn at a high speed, and had disturbed its serenity. "Do you know, Charlie," said Rupert, "I think Simon Brill has made one bad mistake!"

"Let's hear it," replied Charlie.

"He doesn't want us hanging around Coomber House, and he has tried to put us off. Well, his spiritualistic stories might keep the village folk away—but did he seriously think they would frighten a couple of chaps like us?"

"Yes, that was rather silly of him," agreed Charlie.

"And then—this experiment he hinted of to you," Rupert went on. "That was supposed to choke off, too. Silly ass! Why wouldn't such an experiment—if it were really coming off—be just the thing to interest us? Wouldn't it?"

"I'll go further," answered Charlie, "and ask, doesn't it?"

Rupert frowned.

"You know, Miss Marlowe made just the same mistake, Charlie. She tried to put us off, too."

"By Jove, I'd forgotten all about her," exclaimed Charlie. "I let her tell you her life story, didn't I?"

"I wish you had," grunted Rupert. "She told me she was a journalist, 'writing up' Coomber House for her paper. She told me she wanted us to go, and that Brown had gone off voluntarily."

"What, without saying goodbye?" interrupted Charlie.

"I made that point," said Rupert. "And what did she say?"

"That he'd gone at her request, and had left her to explain things to us. Like the sound of it, Charlie?"

"No, I don't! Journalist, eh?"

"That's what she said."

"And why should little Pip chase her, then. Following her for copy, or what?"

"She gave some sort of an explanation, but the whole thing was terribly thin."

"Then you do think she's a wrong 'un?" came Charlie's blunt question.

"I've asked myself that a hundred times," replied Rupert, desperately, "and the only answer I get doesn't answer it at all."

"What's the answer?"

Rupert regarded his companion with a perplexed frown.

"Why—this," he said. "That if Jocelyn Marlowe is a wrong 'un, my world has turned topsy-turvy, because I'm going to follow her to the last ditch."

"So help us heaven!" murmured Charlie; and then added, with rather surprising sagacity: "Don't worry, old sport. Your instincts are pretty sound. Perhaps the fact that you're following her to the last ditch is the strangest part of the whole business."

"We've had her for a long time, haven't we? Anyhow, my lad, Byford Moor has got us both by the throat, and I'll stick to you if you'll stick to me. Good Lord!" he cried, jumping up, "Twenty-seven past!"

"You've got three minutes," replied Rupert. "Wait a second, man! Hi! I'm going to Coomber."

But Charlie was already across the lawn.

With an uneasy feeling that he had wasted too much time in conversing, Rupert left the inn only a few seconds after Charlie. As he jumped into the waiting car, which was facing the lane that wound to Coomber House, he glanced in the opposite direction, and saw the large back of his friend just before it disappeared through the upper contentious doorway to "Dace, Confectioner." Then he settled himself in his seat, started the engine, and began his second trip that morning to the house of mysterious happenings.

He traveled fast. He felt wretchedly anxious. When he had first read Charlie's note after returning from the photographer's, his impulse had been to go straight to Coomber House and to see whether he had been there. Then it had occurred to him that, after all, Miss Marlowe's danger would hardly be likely to materialize during the next few minutes, and that it would be better to get into touch with Charlie, himself, and to learn a little more about the position at Moor View. In this decision he may have been unwise, and in his present growing anxiety he called himself a fool. But he had been frankly doubtful of Charlie's capacity to describe a situation accurately in ink, as also of his ability to deal with a situation in action. In this, as has been shown, he rather underestimated the value of his friend.

So, wisely or unwisely, he had gone to Charlie's assistance first, and now he wished he had left Charlie a little longer to his own resources. It was nearly two hours since he had last seen Jocelyn Marlowe, and nearly two hours since the unsavory Pip had been deputed to watch out for her. Supposed they had already met?

Another factor had entered into Rupert's considerations. Ted, the laborer, already represented a specter in the danger zone. It was questionable, however, how serviceable Ted would prove in a scrap! What if he had overestimated the laborer, as he had underestimated Charlie?

The Theater

With possibly the greatest quarter-year release of attractive box office pictures ever sent out, movie fans are scheduled for a big summer.

Until recently the big pictures were first given a long Broadway run and then shot out over the country. But in order to beat the other fellow to the draw, producers are now opening in New York for a short run and then distributing their films almost immediately.

This has been evident locally at Jimmy Hibbert's Bijou where he has been able to show pictures within a very short time following their Broadway premieres. Some of the shows coming are "Madame X"; "Innocents of Paris"; "Cocacola"; with the Marx Brothers; "Trial of Mary Dugan"; "Bulldog Drummond"; "The Squall"; "Burlesque"; "Broadway"; "Fox Movie-

There is evidence now that the "Mammy" public that has been so largely overcome is to be succeeded by the "Pappy" complex, inspired by Al Jolson's piece with Davey Lee and H. B. Warner's "Sorrell and Son". Eddie Dowling's new "Rainbow Man" has the same theme and there are more on the way.

"The Genius" is soon to be filmed with Jean Hersholt in the role of papa and Phillips R. Holes as the son. Jack Holt is doing a father act in "Father and Son" with Mickey McLean. The movies are doing right by father with a vengeance.

John Gilbert, the well-known bridegroom, now busy on "Redemption", is to do Billy the Kid, famous romantic western figure of another day, for the talkie screen. John's elopement marriage to Ina Claire, famed stage and screen star, was a surprise to friends of both.

SECOND NIGHT CAST
ABLY PLAYS SENIOR CLASS PLAY FRIDAY

That "The Family Upstairs," the latest meteor to flash across the amateur theatrical heavens in Xenia, is a bit of major proportions, was again attested by the enthusiastic reception given the annual Xenia Central High School senior class play by the large audience which saw the three-act comedy produced for the second time by a different cast Friday night in Jean B. Elwell Auditorium.

The second-night audience followed the fortunes of the Heller family and derived an equal amount of enjoyment from the mix-up occasioned by the mother's efforts to marry off her elder daughter, who had never had any boy friends to a young man whom she had invited to her home and to whom she was secretly engaged without the knowledge of her parents.

Parts of "Mr. and Mrs. Heller" were played by Miss Frances Marshall and Charles Zell with a rare understanding. The role of "Louise Heller," their 21-year-old daughter, was capably played by Miss Doris McCormick, while Robert Adair, as "Charles Grant," playing opposite her, gave an excellent portrayal of this character.

Another fine performance was that of Miss Helen Brenner in the role of "Annabelle Heller," a 12-year-old daughter, while the acting of John Little as the happy-go-lucky "Willie Heller," a 17-year-old son, left little to be desired.

Uncommonly good performance in two minor roles were given by Miss Helen Currie as "Miss Calahan," and Miss Mildred Moon as "Mrs. Grant."
